A re you prepared to submit quietly to this change of market day, or are you ready to say to those gentlemen (styled brokers) whe have grown rich out of your toil, whereby they are enabled to fare sumptuously at the Collamore, St. Nicholas, or Metropolitan, that you have a voice in this matter, and mean to be heard? And to those geatlemen who reside in Westchester, Putnam, and other adjacent counties, who prowl about the Bull's Read one or two days in the week, for the purposo of frightening some farmer with the tale that they cannot sell their cattle where the money can be collected, and by these means, and others quite as honorable, obtain the control of said cattle, pocket some two or three hun-red dollars, which is drawn from your hard earnings, and then retire to their aplendid farms, without contributing one farthing toward the support of the city. I say, will you quietly submit to this dictation, and do the bidding of these would-be masters, or will you lists to having a voice in the matter, which certainly is your right? They all came among us poor; they have grown rich out of our foil, and with their riches have waxed insolent, and now demand the control, and that the days be changed from Monday and Thursday to Hursday if they are to sell cattle on Friday instead of Monday, let if be to others, and not to us, out of whose toil, insustry, and integrity these gentlemen have become wenthy. This, I suppose, will be no hardship to some of you, who are reported worth from one hundred thousand oollars to fere such. But it may bring in a better class of men, who will not forget, when they attain your position, that they had, and still have, some poor relations. This is a matter of serious consideration, not only to yourselvea, but to the public at large—I mean this change of market day from Mondays and Thursday's to Thursdays and Fridays—their resons are, it compels them to work on Sundays. It does not give them time to bring cattle from Philadelphia here after the sales day there will not consult a supply. Th

THE NEWSHOY.
FOURth edition now ready.
WHAT SAY THE CRITICS OF LEADING PAPERS?

Bob, the hero, is literally a hero, truly and naturally good. We pity the man who can read this story with a dry eye. We can only say, for ourselves, the midnight lamp burned to its acoket before we could lay it down.
The book seems to bave had for its text, "How far a jittle candle throws its beams—so shines a good deed in this naughty world."—Boaton True American.

As our readers already know, the Newsboy is the book of the season. Beyond doubt, it is a wonderful production—replete with wit and pathos, humor and sentiment.
The author might well have avowed a book worthy of comparison with the happiest efforts of Smollet, Fielding, Sterne or Irving. In glancing over its pages we often find side by side scenes the most affecting and the most ludlerous; thus we are first beguiled of our tears, and then forced to smile through them. Who can study the character drawn of little Bob, of sweet Imogen, and of kind, though puritainical. Aunt Beckey, without admiring the combination of powers by which each was conceived and delineated. But better than all is the excellent moral tone and salutary tealency of the story. To recommend such a book as the Newshoy would be almost as superfucus as to tell people to breathe.—Philadelphis Daily News.

In his pictures of virtue shining with undimmed ray through an atmosphere clouded and dark with vice, we

as superfluous as to tell people to breathe.—Philadelphia Isally News.

In his pictures of virtue shining with undimmed ray through an atmosphere clouded and dark with vice, we are involuntarily reminded of the Touching Word-Painting of Dickeas. Indeed if the name of Dickeas written under the title, his reputation would not be impaired by the association.—Troy Budget.

The book is no less instructive than entertaining. It is a history, a biography, and yet a novel. If deals in facts stranger than fiction, and fiction as real as fact.—Boston Bee.

This powerfully written novel is creating a marked sensation. The narrative is vigorous and exciting, and the plot skilfully managed. The unknown author draws largely from real life, and presents to our gaze, living, breating characters, which are readily recognized.—Boston true Flag.

It will have a great run, and will do good, as it is a grand story and capitally told.—Detroit Tribune.

It is a book over which wet eyes are better crities than cold words. Yet its story on the stage would bring the house to tears and silence the fault finder with sobs.—Bangor Mercury.

The reader is captured by the first chapter, and led a willing captive to the end of the book. Have you read the Newsboy! is a question passing from mouth to mouth in the eastern circles.—Summit (0.) Beacon.

The Newsboy is elegantly got up with illustrations, and makes a large 12mo. of 550 pages. Price $1.25.
